SECTION B

Medicine in Britain, c1250–present

Answer Questions 3 and 4. Then answer EITHER Question 5 OR Question 6.

3 Explain one way in which the Great Plague in London (1665) was similar to the cholera epidemic in London (1854).

1

One way in which the Great Plague was similar to the cholera epidemic is that people believed that both epidemics were caused by miasma. For example, during the Great Plague, plague doctors wore beaked masks filled with herbs to prevent contracting the illness. Similarly, during the cholera epidemic, people burned barrels of tar for the same reason.

How can parents and carers help?

- Remind your child about the importance of using their extra time.
- Ensure they have a black pen and a green pen.
- Encourage your child to revise thoroughly. Students cannot use their extra time if they cannot answer the exam questions.
