

MR A SETTLE

(CHAIR)

I have spent most of my career working in the education sector in schools, further education and universities. My first teaching post was at Millfield School, teaching Physical Education and English, before moving to a career in universities, eventually becoming Principal and Chief Executive at Newcastle College, a large college of further and higher education with 20,000 students and 1,500 staff.

For the last 10 years I have researched, developed and applied strategic planning and evaluative methodologies in the public and community sectors. This work, in partnership with Acknowledge Inc at the university of New York, measures impact and public value in order to assist in large scale funding applications and measuring performance.
