Points of contact

#TutorFirst

SEND is a golden thread running through the school not an isolated department

All teachers, support staff and leaders are active participants in a SEND student's educational journey

For pastoral difficulties...

...The Tutor is the first point of contact.

They use the 'Pupil Passport' and information from BromCom to help put strategies in place to address the issue.

If the query is not resolved, the Tutor may make contact with the student's Keyworker/LSA, if they have one.

Actions taken, up to this point, will be identified and logged before referring to HOY.

If the HOY is unable to resolve the issue, they will refer to, or consult, the SEN Team for the consideration and allocation of an appropriate support pathway.

This process is called a Graduated Response. It ensures that all colleagues consider student's needs and identify strategies to support needs through reflective practice.

For learning difficulties...

...The Subject Teacher is the first point of contact.
Tutors will forward any queries of this nature to the subject teacher.

They use the 'Pupil Passport', assessment data from BromCom and their own reasonable adjustments to explore the difficulty in accessing lessons and take first steps to resolve issues.

If the identified support strategies are not effective, and there is no progress made after two cycles (e.g. 2 half terms), the teacher will meet with the Head of Curriculum subject before considering a referral to the SEN triage system.

SEND students on the register at 'Targeted' level who are consistently working below age-related expectations over time will be assessed for intervention.

The Graduated Response: A whole setting approach

This is a fluid process: Students can move up or down the levels of need dependent on progress.
